GRANTS & FUNDING

Grants and Funding Acquisition

The procurement of financial support for scholarly research and institutional projects is a critical function at the Divya Jyoti Ayurvedic Medical College. Comprehensive support is provided to all researchers, from both the faculty and student body, in navigating the complex landscape of grant applications and funding opportunities. This process is structured to maximize the potential for successful acquisition of resources from a multitude of sources.

Financial support is primarily sourced through two distinct channels: internal institutional grants and external funding. Internal grants, which are provided by the Group itself, are typically allocated for pilot studies, small-scale projects, and initial research endeavors. The application process for these funds is managed by the Institutional Grants Office and is governed by an established timeline and review criteria.

External funding is sought from a variety of entities, including government agencies, such as the Ministry of AYUSH, as well as private foundations, corporations, and international non-governmental organizations.

The preparation of proposals for external grants is an arduous and highly detailed process. Assistance is provided for every stage, from the identification of suitable funding announcements to the development of a compelling project narrative, a detailed budget, and a comprehensive project timeline. Proposals are subjected to a rigorous internal peer review process prior to submission to ensure their quality and alignment with the requirements of the granting body.

Once funds have been successfully secured, the college's financial department assumes responsibility for the meticulous management and oversight of all expenditures. Regular financial reports are prepared and submitted to both the principal investigator and the funding agency, ensuring complete transparency and accountability in the use of all resources. This systematic approach is a direct reflection of the college's commitment to the sustainability and growth of its research programs.
